Anba Epiphanius since 2013 is abbot-archbishop of the monastery of Saint Macarius in the desert of Scete. Born in Tanta (Egypt) in 1954, he graduated in 1978 in surgery. He entered the monastery of Saint Macarius in 1984 and was ordained priest in 2002. He was a disciple of Father Matta el Meskin, igumen of the monastery from 1969 to 2006. In the monastery he worked for a long time for the publishing house and as editor of the magazine of the monastery. He was an economist, in addition to having provided services for many years as a doctor of the community. After his election as abbot he wanted to keep the post of librarian and responsible for the section of manuscripts. Currently he is a member of the commission for the promotion of culture at the Holy Synod, established by S.S. Tawadros II.

He is also the author of numerous publications, among which the edition and numbering of the "Bustan al-Ruhban" ('The garden of the monks,' Arabic version of the Apophthegmata patrum); the translation and commentary of the eucologio of the White Monastery; the translation and commentary of the liturgies of Saint Basil and Saint Gregory; many articles of patristics, liturgy, monasticism on the Arabic Saint Mark and Alexandria School.
